A Plea for Amusement and Physical Culture.

In the education of girls, physical culture is of still greater importance. Who can read Miss Beecher's startling array of facts about deformed spines, and round shoulders, and ruinous habits in American boarding schools, and not feel the urgent demand for reform? Few girls who are educated in the public schools escape the universal law of labor; most of them when they enter, at an early age, homes of their own, need strength as well as accomplishments. Any education purchased at the expense of health is a loss. The fact is, too many of the little misses in our schools were never girls. They are simply little old ladies, who never romp, never play, never know anything of the rich sensuous life of a rude country girl.

"The English girl spends more than one-half her waking hours in physical amusements, which tend to develop and invigorate, and ripen the bodily powers. She rides, walks, drives, rows upon the water, runs, dances, plays, sings, jumps the rope. hurls the quoit, draws the bow, keeps up the shuttle-cock-and all this without having it forever upon her mind that she is wasting her time. She does this every day until it becomes a habit which she will follow up through life. Her frame, as a natural consequence, is larger; her muscular system better developed; her mental system in better subordination; her strength more enduring, and the whole tone of her mind healthier." Which is preferable, the robust health of the English woman, who can walk twenty miles a day, or the timid accomplishments of an American boarding school young lady, sent home "finished to order !"

The truth is, mental and physical health walk hand in hand. Other things being equal, the brain which has the strongest body will do the most work. The girl who has a headache three days in six is a useless piece of furniture in a school-room.

The strong boys, in the long run, come out ahead. Strong mind and pluck are better than brilliance and precociousness. When an ox is let into a pasture full of cattle, there is a trial of horns, and the strongest takes the lead; so with the boys of a public school. The strong, the energetic, the active, are the real kings of school, whether they are at the head or foot of the arithmetic class. Give the boy, then, the exercise his nature craves, and which will make him a living boy and a manly man. If he leaves school with a fondness for athletic amusements, he has one of the surest safeguards against expensive and ruinous dissipation.

A judicious union of social, mental and physical culture, will make our public schools practically adapted to the wants of the people. If parents, through ignorance, neglect the proper training of their children, let the public school take charge of them. Amusements form a part of education, and much excellent gymnastic and calisthenic training may be connected with games, or made delight-

But many teachers will say, all this is very fine, theoretically, but it is utterly impossible to carry it into the school-room. We have no money to buy apparatus. The public regard such things as innovations. We have no time to spare, and know nothing about it ourselves. Let us, then, consider the subject in a very plain, connected with a public school of five hundred children for the last five years. During that time, gymnastic and calisthenic training have been as much a part of our daily teaching as arithmetic, grammar or geography. We have made experi-ments and noted results, and claim, at least, to have a foundation of facts from our own experience. We have practiced what we preach. We have hand, which they will sell at the lowest market rates. [23 tf been laughed at as foolish, sneered at as boyish, blamed for innovations, shunned by conservatives, and frowned upon by those who ought to have given encouragement. But we patiently "stuck to it," and have established fully the principle we desired, and accomplished more than we ever hoped for. Mothers who objected to letting their boys exercise in the gymnasium, for fear they would tear their trowsers, or break their necks, now mend their clothes, and are proud of the agility and activity of their sons. Many who once sent notes to excuse " Mary" and " Dora" and " Ella " from " rods" and " dumb-bells," are now glad to have the advantages of such training. We have seen IRON WORKS awkward, clumsy, lubberly boys enter the gymnastic class, the laughing stock of the "experts," and leave school, in a year, active gymnasts, twice as Machinery and Smith's Work, at the shortest notice and cheapstrong as when they entered, and all their strength at perfect command. We have seen pale, weaklylooking boys, who at first only moped around and "looked on," become interested, and take hold in earnest, until the narrow chest expanded, the round shoulders were pushed back and the soft, lean arm become like knotted whip cords. The measurement of many boys' arms have shown an increase in circumference of one inch in three months, and an expansion of the chest of two or three inches in the same time. All these results have been slow. A few fitful feats will not make an athletic gymnast, neither will all boys become robust under training; but in six months you will find the boys clear-headed, and more cheerful, and the girls erect, and more graceful in their walk. We have organized classes, conducted daily, at regular times, and always by ourselves. All apparatus is useless, unless a teacher infuses into it his own life. Come, and not go, is the word of command. The class emulate the teacher. As well put books into the bands of pupils, and tell them to teach themselves, as send them into a gymnasium, and expect them to practice without a teacher. It is no small tax on a teacher's time; it requires patience, resolution, and persistent efforts-but it can be done.

How can a teacher find time for such exercise ! Take it. In pleasant weather, we exercise in the Patent Boat Blocks, yard with the boys, half an hour, from 9 1-2 to 10 o'clock; we give the girls a calisthenic exercise of fifteen minutes, at noon, taken out of the threequarters of an hour intermission. In the afternoon, at two o'clock recess, the boys take a dumbbell or club exercise of ten minutes. This is too little time, but in six months it allows a great amount of training. When men have true views of education, more time will be given. Little children, in years to come, will have only a short session of three hours a day. Years ago, clergy-men preached sermons two hours long, and those were weak in the faith who could not listen patiently. Better sermons are preached now, with as good results, in thirty minutes. So it is with schools. The old six hour session is doomed to become obsolete, and better teachers than we will teach more

Teachers should study variety in all their exerand change; witness how tops succeed to marbles, and marbles to kites, and kites to ball. It requires cises. They soon tire, and boys are fond of novelty more skill, tact, and judgment, than the routine of text books. Any teacher who thoroughly understands boy-nature, may mingle freely in their sports. If he can beat them all at their cwn games, he will command their respect, and win their love; but if he is overburdened with dignity, and a bunplay-ground. The first teacher we learned to love, the first one who ever waked us up, and who remains to this day our beau ideal of a teacher, played ball with us in the academy yard in P—.

A. P. EVERETT, Agent. in a gymnasium. An owl should not mingle with swallows and singing birds; they have nothing in common. A teacher needs exercise even more than his pupils. No occupation so drains the system of its nervous vitality; therefore, he needs amusement and recreation. He must find the "Fountain ment and recreation. He must find the "Fountain of Youth" in the sports of boyhood. The teacher who neglects his physical being must suffer the penalty. We knew a teacher, three years ago, brought face to face with death, by Panama and congestive brain-fever, contracted on one of the pestiferous steamships—bad as the lower hold of pestiferous steamships—bad as the lower hold of a slave ship's hell—which ply between New York and Aspinwall. Those only who have suffered from the secondary effects of such a sickness, can imagine its deadening, debilitating, and disheartening character. Yet, under the pressure of daily duty in school, a regular course of exercises, persevered in as a religious duty, brought back vigor of mind and body. For ourselves, as long as we teach, we mean to give the physical nature of children its due, even f examinations are less "brilliant," children less recocious, and "infant phenomenons" more rare. We teach to train boys and girls to grow up sensible men and women, and to form tastes and habits which shall follow them through life. We seek to make the school-room a home. There must be some kindness, to soften the necessary strictness of discipline in a public school. The indirect lessons of the play-ground are often more important than the studied teaching of a class-room; and the kind word of social intercourse will be remembered when geography and grammar shall have faded from the mind. We would have our pupils retain the memory of their teacher as a sharer of their sports, a sympathizer in their joys, and feel the influence of his teaching as a living man, moulding their character and forming their habits, rather than as a schoolmaster, who feed them with the dry chaff of text books.
